President's Message

Hello everyone and thank you for coming out and making our January club meeting so enjoyable! Bob Campbell's hospitality and presentation at his shop, All About Coins were just amazing and the surprise presentation from Wilf Blum from Deep Blue Marine was nothing short of fascinating. I hope everyone enjoyed the evening as much as I did.

February's meeting will be back at our regular location the Columbus Community Center. Mr. Bentsen Moss has graciously agreed to give a presentation on his dog tag collection which is second to none!

Remember, the club medal design voting will occur at the March meeting. We'll have forms on hand at February's meeting. Please take the time to participate and submit your ideas.

I'm starting to believe in some type of correlation between the famous groundhog and NUTS club members. There have been unconfirmed reports of metal detectorist emerging from their holes and getting some hunting in. No word if anyone found their shadows, tokens, or coins. Stay tuned...

See everyone at the 24th meeting!

I found a rare token! Now what?

Well, first off, congratulations! There are a lot of prized finds out there but for me, there is nothing like digging an old trade token. The history of the old towns comes alive for me holding one of these old pieces of "private money".

As much as I love finding them, I've seen plenty of situations get sideways after the find. The following is a partial list of considerations I feel are important to keep the hobby positive and to maintain good relationships.

The find site: Have you made agreements with the owner or your hunting partner regarding found valuables? If so, honor them. Of course, others will want to know where you found your item. If it is public property or the owner has given broad permission, I enjoy sharing a good site, especially with those who have shared with me. Otherwise, I tend to be protective of the owner's privacy and don't give out their address. Being honest with my fellow hunters on this point has served me well so far.

Identification: Here again, this is where good relationships pay off. I can't afford every token book in print but I know a lot of people with access to this information. These folks have paid for their knowledge and resources and when I call on them for their expertise, I like to acknowledge it either by supporting their business, taking them to a good site, etc... Properly identifying a token has everything to do with its value and collectability. Not long ago, I dug a Maverick (no town or state name) token at a dump site. I wasn't too excited until an expert identified it as an extremely rare Idaho token and referred me to a potential buyer.

Cleaning: Opinions vary on the subject but token value is generally less affected than coins when it comes to cleaning. Some methods can be very harmful, especially on aluminum tokens so if you opt to clean it yourself, be careful and take your time! If you know the token to be rare, consider having an expert clean it for you. If you intend to sell or trade, many collectors are particular. Some like shiny while others prefer an antiqued look. Know your potential buyers.

Collecting, selling, and trading: This is where feelings can get hurt. I know of unique tokens that will never be seen because someone doesn't like someone else. A shame really for those who are thrilled just to see a new town token discovered regardless of who owns it. Same goes for selling, you might beat a collector's offer by a few bucks by selling your token online, but will the fees make it a wash? That same collector may very well be the person you need when it comes to your next find.

Every situation is different. My hope in sharing these opinions is that in these situations, we can all remember our friends, the code of ethics, and all the great things that brought us to the hobby in the first place. Good Hunting!

JANUARY SPEAKER NOTES

Bob Campbell hosted the club meeting at his newly remodeled "All About Coins" and gave a fascinating presentation on the inner workings of the shop. His presentation was highlighted by the display of some very LARGE gold specie and his ultra rare 1804 Silver Dollar. Anyone owning the "Red Book" of United States coins is probably aware of the significance of this coin and knows the opportunity to actually view it is equally rare. Thank you Bob!

Club Wagon master Bill Glodowski also introduced surprise guest, Mr. Wilf Blum, President of Deep Blue Marine. Deep Blue is actively involved in shipwreck/treasure recovery operations in the Dominican Republic. Again, club members had the rare opportunity to view and handle rare silver coins and relics recovered by Deep Blue. We are hopeful to have Mr. Blum back for a future presentation.
